

Elena Cristofori

---

Elena Cristofori, Co-Founder and Chief Scientific Officer of Translate into Meaning (TRiM), is a Civil Engineer and PhD in Environmental Protection and Risk Management. She is an expert in Hydrology, Applied Meteorology and Disaster Prevention. Elena has worked for more than 15 years in the field of Disaster Risk Reduction and People-Centred Early Warning Systems with a particular focus on the participatory design and implementation of community-based decision support tools facilitating the integration of scientific data with traditional and local knowledge. Elena has collaborated with universities, international research institutes, and no-profit organisations and has been involved as a senior expert and project manager in several national and international projects, such as iCoast (EU), Copernicus Emergency Management Service – Rapid Mapping, Programme RIMRAP (Mauritanie), Croops4Food (Zimbabwe), One Health Project (Kenya and Ethiopia), Latte&Miele (Niger), Boresha (Ethiopia), Pre-educate (Zimbabwe).

